So The Insuring Public May Know

Recently, the Philippine non-life insurers have been criticized in the media about under payment of 2006 taxes and under capitalization by its own government regulator, the Insurance Commission. The industry has resorted to this paid advertisement so that the public may know the truth.

1. 2006 P8B TAX UNDERPAYMENT NEWS NOT TRUE.

The recent announcement of the Insurance Commission that the insurance industry owed the government some P8 billion in unpaid 2006 taxes is erroneous and truly unfair.

The news erred in that the Insurance Commission's computations did not exclude VAT-exempt premiums of medical/PA policies and zero-rated VAT for PEZA locators, but included VAT on accounts receivables that are only due when collected in 2007 and income taxes payable in April 2007.

Without doing any validation with insurance companies, the Insurance Commission summarily issued an announcement that unduly prejudiced good corporate taxpayers by labeling an entire industry as tax cheats.

The partial results of an ongoing survey being done among non-life insurers show that paid taxes increased from P2.36 billion in 2005 to P2.5 billion in 2006 (documentary stamps tax, VAT, fire service tax, local government taxes and income taxes).

The VAT and DST taxes at 24.5% of premiums are the highest in terms of percentage of non-life premiums in all countries in Asia and most countries in the world.

2. CAPITALIZATION NEWS PREJUDICIAL TO INSURERS.

The past year, the Department of Finance, upon the recommendation of the Insurance Commission, imposed a higher capitalization requirement on all insurance companies in a bid to lift the industry to the level of more developed countries.

Though it is widely believed that the new requirement was fiscally premature given the size of the market and the country's economic realities, still we all are doing our best to comply with the Risk Based Capital implementation.

Notwithstanding, the Insurance Commission jumped the gun and announced the names of 15 companies that have allegedly failed to meet the 2006 capitalization level. The announcement was reckless to say the least as it included even companies that have capitalization higher than the requirement. These companies suffered cancellation of policies and bank accreditation and lost renewal business due to the negative news.

The Insurance Commission's publication of unverified data again undermined the integrity and credibility of the named companies who were compelled to issue press releases just to be vindicated and their side heard. The industry suffered peripherally and, somehow, lost credibility with the insuring public.

3. INSURERS DESERVE DUE PROCESS.

The Insurance Commission has been issuing many circulars, some of which were without sufficient consultation with industry players and without appreciation of market realities. Recently, there was the difficult requirement for insurance brokers and agents to secure a P1.5-million guaranty payment bond at a prohibitive cost of P40,000 to P50,000 with collateral which is all out of proportion to the P3,600 minimum insurance income prescribed in the Insurance Code. The new requirement would result in disenfranchising small and provincial agents from turning to the non-life industry for life-giving income. In a country with noticeable unemployment and underemployment, this action restricts the nationwide opportunities for job creation.

The recent acts of the Insurance Commission that unduly embarrassed the industry could have been avoided had there been open lines of communication between the Commission and industry players. The non-life insurance industry has been in existence for over 100 years now and we recognize that change is inevitable and it can even redound to the benefit of both the industry and the public when an atmosphere of respect, open and constructive dialogue as well as positive action is cultivated.

We need an Insurance Commission that would guide us in transforming the industry cognizant of the need to protect and serve the public, and compliant with the principles of Good Corporate Governance.

More than anybody else, the Insurance Commission should realize that public credibility is the cornerstone of any business and our industry is determined to uphold this even in these extremely trying and uncertain times.

Demolition in Muslim community

By Julie M. Aurelio

TWO DAYS AFTER VOWING TO DIE fighting for their mosque, Muslims in the Baclaran reclamation area finally let a demolition team tear down their shanties yesterday.

The team, however, spared the community's Grand Mosque, which residents vowed to defend, as a relocation site for the structure had yet to be identified.

More than 300 makeshift houses on Roxas Boulevard were demolished by the team from the Philippine Reclamation Authority (PRA).

"The Grand Mosque will not be included in the dismantling until a relocation site is found," said [illegible] Andaga, director of the Office of the President for Muslim Affairs. He asked the residents not to go against the demolition.

Andaga said they were considering the [illegible] as a possible relocation site for the mosque.

Issey Miyake

The renowned designer's unique aesthetic can be seen in his watch collection, created by an award-winning retinue of designers

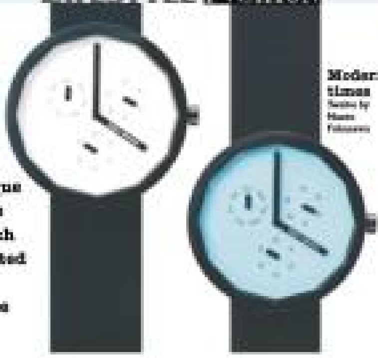

THE ICONIC ISSEY MIYAKE made his mark in the world with his technology-driven design sensibilities.

The renowned Hiroshima native, arguably the most famous Japanese designer in the world today, has successfully merged East and West with beautiful designs that have a distinct architectural construct with an emphasis on subtle details.

His creations manifest a philosophy of balance between tradition and technology, cutting-edge and craftsmanship. Today, Issey Miyake has stores in Tokyo, Paris, New York and London.

Issey Miyake's timeless design philosophy can be seen in his unique watch collection, created by an award-winning retinue of designers. Each watch piece is an architectural wonder that bespeaks a modern, innovative and subtly strong individual.

The watches explore form and function, in surprising shape and space with exquisite details. Each watch designer for the Issey brand is able to convey his or her own point of view with a particular creation, while remaining true to form with the Issey fashion philosophy.
